

SHOW US YOUR GREEN

DCL expands solar panel system

DCL is sold on going green and leading Silicon Valley environmental conservation efforts by installing a second addition of solar panels. REgrid has returned to supply DCL with another solar panel system that will offset over 36 percent of the company's annual electricity usage. The installation of the 75 kilowatt solar power electric system began July 20 on DCL's headquarters building on Milmont Drive in Fremont. This individual system will generate 111,719 kilowatt hours of electricity per year, yielding the same environmental benefit as planting 61.4 acres of trees. Together, both devices will conserve a whopping 250,000 kilowatts of electricity per year and cut the energy bill by over 75 percent.

Combined with the previous system installed April 2007, the solar technology will dramatically reduce energy operating costs within the company and help significantly diminish the emission of green house gases into earth's atmosphere. DCL's green initiative sets an example for other industrial manufacturing industries to follow, with the hope that they will join DCL in becoming a "Green Business" and reap the benefits of environmental stewardship.

DCL is a leading provider of outsourced manufacturing and logistics services for technology industries. Its customers include electronics, software and healthcare companies. DCL's business-to-business services include order processing, project management, packaging and assembly, fulfillment and distribution, inventory management and warehousing and returns management. DCL is ISO 9001-2000 certified, EDI, RFID and MRP/ERP enabled for online, 24/7 visibility to production, inventory and shipping information.

For more information, visit dclcorp.com

Club Auto Sport: up and rolling

Condos for cars... a venue for charities

Perhaps you've read about it, or heard about it from one of your friends. It certainly has been a hot topic in the press since its grand opening on May 29th. Maybe you thought you heard wrong—condos for cars?

But it's true: Club Auto Sport provides purpose-built condominiums and an exclusive club environment for people with collections of cars, motorcycles or other valuable vehicles. Standard and premium concierge-arranged services are also provided to save time for busy business people. And, the innovative club and secure car condo storage facility—developed by Borelli Investment Company—is right here at 521 Charcot Avenue in San Jose.

"We are excited to have had a hand in Silicon Valley's first car condominiums and club," said Ralph Borelli, chairman of Borelli Investment Company, a managing partner of Club Auto Sport, and an avid car enthusiast himself. "There are many people in this valley who truly love automobiles, and collect or race cars. Club Auto Sport offers a unique environment to gather with friends—and a safe place to store, work on, and enjoy their collections."

unique venue as well, and some already have. In June, Club Auto Sport hosted an event for the Parkinson's Institute, and currently, the San Jose Fire Museum has on display in Club Auto Sport's state-of-the-art showroom, a special exhibition of the San Jose Fire Department's collection of historical fire apparatus and equipment, including steam engines, ladder trucks and antique pumps. The display is free and open to the public until September 12. Philanthropists and event planners alike recognize the possibilities behind the soaring steel and glass façade. The facility is 120,000 square feet, with a commercial kitchen, a 10,000 square foot exhibition space and other amenities that promise to make Club Auto Sport the event venue of choice in Silicon Valley.

Next Up: Monterey. Club Auto Sport-Silicon Valley has only been open a few months, and already plans are in the works for the next Club Auto Sport in Monterey. The club will be located close to famed Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, and serve the many car collectors who make the Monterey Peninsula their home. The Monterey location is possible, in part, by a partnership agreement with Gordon McCall – one of the foremost names in vintage automobile events, restoration, Well-Attended Opening. The grand opening of Club Auto Sport attracted more than 1,000 people—led by San Jose Mayor Chuck Reed and a host of prominent business executives. Representatives from many car clubs were also there, as were officials from leading charities. One of Club Auto Sport's founding principles is to give back to the community, and the club has designated Canary Foundation as its official charity and beneficiary of the grand opening event. The Canary Foundation was founded by Silicon Valley entrepreneur Don Listwin to address a notable lack of balance in cancer research. Listwin, also a car enthusiast, was responsible for bringing the Grand Prix to San Jose.

Raising the Bar for Raising Funds. The Canary Foundation may be the official charity of Club Auto Sport, but other causes will benefit from this detailing, and Concours judging. As part of the agreement, McCall will relocate a number of his business ventures, such as McCall Events, LLC, to Club Auto Sport-Monterey. McCall has also been named director of club services for Club Auto Sport-Monterey and will oversee all activities and events for club members.

"There really isn't anything like Club Auto Sport," said John Davis, managing partner of Club Auto Sport and founder of the National Historic Stock Car Racing Series. "It's not just a storage facility or a garage, or another traditional club, it's a unique facility that really must be seen first-hand to be fully appreciated."

To arrange a tour, contact Larry Bengiveno at larry@borelli.com, or call (408) 453-4700. Club Auto Sport will be hosting the Tri-Chamber Mixer, Thursday, September 4. To register, go to sjchamber.com, or for more information, call 408-291-5286.

"The MUST ATTEND event of the summer!"

COMPAC

2008 BARBECUE SHAKIN' IT UP

Thursday, August 28, 5:30-9:30 p.m.

History Park, San Jose

No speeches or lengthy programs interfere with the spirited conversation between elected officials, candidates and the political insiders who make this evening a "must attend."

REGISTER TODAY FOR THIS SELL OUT EVENT!

visit sjchamber.com

For more information, contact Jana Hamdy, 408-291-5267 or janah@sjchamber.com

COMPAC: The Political Action Committee for the SJSV Chamber of Commerce